

Table of Contents

Introduction	IX
1 Corporate Governance.
Why, When, and How?	1
1.1 One vote, one share, and the problem of substantive democracy	1
1.2 Towards regulation, disclosure, and transparency	5
1.3 Discovering and reforming “continent” Corporate Governance	8
PART ONE: GOVERNANCE AND MANAGEMENT
2 Ownership, Governance,
and Management of Companies	17
2.1 What is corporate governance?	17
2.2 The different perspectives of corporate governance	19
2.3 The “traditional” corporate governance problem	23
2.4 The public company and the agency theory	25
2.4.1 A first variant of the agency’s basic scheme	27
2.4.2 A second variant of the agency’s basic scheme	29
2.5 The origins of “bad governance”	31
2.6 The signs of “bad governance”	34
2.7 Responses to the problem of “bad governance”	37
2.7.1 Imposing structures, rules, and mechanisms	38
2.7.2 Making markets efficient	40
2.7.3 Favoring certain capital structures	42
3 Corporate Governance Mechanisms:
The Board of Directors. Past, Present, and Future	51
3.1 The role of the board of directors in company governance	51
3.2 The international corporate governance codes	54
3.2.1 One example: The UK Corporate Governance Code
and its evolution	55
3.2.2 The new 2018 edition of the UK Corporate Governance Code	57
3.3 The characteristics of the board of directors	59
3.3.1 The composition	59

3.3.2	The structure	67
3.3.3	The working style	72
3.4	The board evaluation	77
3.4.1	Five different international approaches for board evaluations	80
3.4.2	Good practices: The WWWH questions	83
3.5	The future challenges	84
4	The Ownership Structure and Related Governance Models	93
4.1	The characteristics of ownership structures	93
4.1.1	Ownership concentration	93
4.1.2	Owner identity	97
4.2	The various forms of ownership structure	100
4.2.1	Public companies	101
4.2.2	Mixed coalitions	102
4.2.3	Multi-National Enterprises (MNEs)	103
4.2.4	State-Owned Enterprises (SOEs)	110
4.2.5	Private equity and venture capital	114
4.2.6	“Non-capitalist” enterprises	117
5	The Family-Controlled Firm	125
5.1	What are family-controlled firms?	125
5.2	The distribution of family-controlled firms around the world	126
5.3	The peculiarities of family-controlled firms	128
5.4	Family ownership in different theoretical frameworks	131
5.5	The corporate governance of family-controlled firms	134
5.6	The main challenges of family firms: Openness and generational change	136
6	Ownership, Governance, and Strategy	145
6.1	The relevance of the topic	145
6.2	The relationships between ownership, governance, and strategy: A basic model	147
6.2.1	Context conditions	149
6.2.2	Consistency relationships between the variables of the model	151
6.2.3	The first variant in the case of public companies	153
6.2.4	The second variant in the case of controlling shareholders	156
6.3	The role of ownership in strategic choices	160
6.3.1	The ownership structure: Some “dichotomies”	160
6.3.2	The main corporate strategic choices	162
6.3.3	The possible relationships between ownership structures and strategic choices	164
6.4	The relevance and the new frontiers of corporate governance	166
6.4.1	Environmental, social, and governance (ESG) investing	168
6.4.2	Investors’ activism and shareholders’ engagement	171

6.5	Some final implications and suggestions	173
6.5.1	Strengthening the role of ownership (where it is weak)	174
6.5.2	Strengthening the role of governance bodies (when the ownership is strong)	175
6.5.3	Beyond compliance: The importance of governance in private companies	176
PART TWO: ADOPTING AND ADAPTING CORPORATE GOVERNANCE AROUND THE WORLD
7	Germany, One of the Homes to Corporate Governance	189
7.1	At the very origins of the model	189
7.2	Germany between Ordo-liberalism and Mitbestimmung	192
7.3	Toward the Code of Corporate Governance	194
7.4	The difficulties despite the long tradition: Scandals, institutional investors, and German corporate governance	197
8	France, Corporate Governance, the Resilience of the Past, and Market Pressure	207
8.1	Is corporate governance a State affair? From Colbert to the privatization process of the 1980s	207
8.2	The evolution of the ownership structure, the PDG, and the “new” corporate governance	210
8.3	Protecting minority shareholders, or favoring long-term investors? The French dilemma	213
8.4	The resistance: Old habits die-hard	215
9	Italy, Corporate Governance, and the Many Paradoxes of an Advanced Economy	225
9.1	The historical background	225
9.2	The Italian mixed economy	227
9.3	The reforms, finally	229
10	Japan, Corporate Governance, and the Culture of Harmony	241
10.1	Corporate governance between history and culture: From the zaibatsu to the keiretsu	241
10.2	The lost decade and the need for economic reforms	244
10.3	From the new Commercial Law to the first Code of Corporate Governance	248
11	Corporate Governance in Emerging Countries. Between Market, State, and Family: The Cases of Brazil, Argentina, India, and China	257
11.1	The emerging economies and the capital markets	257
11.2	Brazil, corporate governance, and the need for stability	260

11.2.1	The privatization process of the 1990s	260
11.2.2	The new rules concerning corporate governance	261
11.3	Argentina, corporate governance and the dream of common law	263
11.3.1	The impossible bid of the 1990s: From civil law to common law	263
11.3.2	The 2001 default and its consequences for corporate governance	265
11.4	India: Corporate governance, and the contradictions of the world's biggest political democracy	267
11.4.1	The British legacy	267
11.4.2	The economic reforms of the 1990s and the introduction of the code of corporate governance	269
11.4.3	Between the largest stock exchange and the power of family capitalism	272
11.5	China, corporate governance, the power of the State, and the ineluctable strength of the market	275
11.5.1	The economic reforms	275
11.5.2	The Chinese stock market and the introduction of corporate governance	277
11.5.3	The anti-corruption campaign and corporate governance	282
12	Between the State and the Market: Corporate Governance in Former Centrally Planned Economies. The Cases of Russia and Poland	293
12.1	Russia, corporate governance and the never-ending transition to a market economy	293
12.1.1	The difficult transition from a Soviet economy to a market economy	293
12.1.2	The weakness of the capital market	296
12.1.3	The introduction of the code of corporate governance: How to pay a "debt" to Western countries	298
12.1.4	The State and the society: Two conflicting actors for good corporate governance?	300
12.2	Poland, corporate governance, the strength of the market, and the resistance of the blockholders	302
12.2.1	Rediscovering the market	302
12.2.2	The beginning of corporate governance	304
12.2.3	The concentration of ownership and the role of the pension funds	307
	Bibliography	315
	Index of names	337